NKBA 2008 DESIGN COMPETITION

Art of the Industry

Award-winning kitchen and bath designs exude
original, stylish design

Compiled By: Matt Walsh

Peninsula Publishing is pleased to showcase the winners of the National Kitchen and Bath Association's (NKBA) 2008 Design Competition: Art of the Industry. A special thanks to Diana Tuorto, editorial services coordinator for the NKBA, for assisting with photography and design information details. Entries were categorized by room type and then further divided based on size for a total of ten categories. Large kitchens were the most popular category receiving the most entries.

ANTHONY ALBERT PASSANANTE, CKD Peter Salerno Inc.

This exceptionally large kitchen showcases two massive islands. The first island is set up as an alternative cooking station, fully equipped with a sink, single burner, steamer and microwave. A wood countertop was lowered to table height, providing an intimate eating space for two, including a clear view of the television, which is set behind a pair of pocket doors.

This home was built in the 1920s and was in need of a complete remodel with a focus on contemporary design. The owners had a wall separating the kitchen and living area, which made the house look smaller. By removing it, enough space was created to incorporate the additional appliances.

A frequent entertainer, the client's primary goal was to create a kitchen that would serve as an elegant backdrop for herself and her guests. A wine station, display space for contemporary art pieces, an island centerpiece and thoughtful organization make this happen.
